Mr. E. H. House thus writes to the Tribune concerning the appearance of the Prince of Wales, upon his reception at Halifax:

The Prince was singularly prepossessing.
Of all who now saw him for the first time, not one but was agreeably impressed. With extreme delicacy and regularity of feature, thorough refinement in expression, and a the moment; with unaffected dignity of manner, and a gracefulness of bearing that showed itself in the brief passage to the spot assigned for his reception, he needed few other claims to win the most cordial acclamation of his welcomers. He was dressed in the uniform of a Colonel of the Guards—a scarlet coat, black trowsers, and hat with plume. He wore, also, the broad ribbon of the Garter. Erect and well formed, this costume was greatly in his favor. All persons were struck with the youthfulness of his appearance, for which a knowledge of his precise age seemed not to have prepared them. As he stood listening to the reading of the address, with undisturbed composure, and in easy attitude, he looked as handsome a young English gentleman as the most zealous of his provincial well wishers could have desired to find him.

His face is not unlike the Queen's, as we have it represented in portraits, and the forehead and chin are still less prominent. His hair is light, and his complexion very fair. His eye is bright and keen. The other features are large, but not ill formed, and the mouth is peculiarly expressive of quickness to mirth. The best likeness I have seen of him is a steel engraving which accompanied a recent number of a London illustrated paper, the News of the World, which is admirably perfect. A large wood cut in Frank Leslie's Newspaper, which has just reached this place, is also excellent in every detail, excepting that the mouth is too hard and compressed. In general effects, this likeness is very accurate.

Mayor Lincoln, on his way to St. John, on the Styx, invited the Prince to visit Boston, and, if need be, to bring his fleet into Boston harbor, and embark there for Europe. The Duke of Newcastle afterwards told the Mayor. that no programme could yet be settled for the visit to the United States, as it was not known how long the Prince would remain in Canada; that the Queen desired him to return so as to recommence his studies in the month of October; and that time must therefore govern his movements. It was added, that authority had a declaration made to Mr. Benton, who spoke been given to Lord Lyons, the British Embas-Highness, and that on meeting him at Quebec, it would be settled where the Prince would go. As to the embarkation for Europe, nothing was as yet fixed, but it was likely it would be at New York, though Portland had been spoken

The Prince of Wales, so the officers of the Hero tell me, experienced little sea sickness after leaving Plymouth in the Hero. The officers' mess room having been vacated, that apartments for His Royal Highness might be fitted up, there is plenty of room made for him and his suite. The dining-room is immediate-ly under the poop, and his bed room is at the stern. The dining-room contains very simple furniture, but what there is is elegant in the extreme. On the sideboard are two beautiful little marble busts, one of the Queen, and the other of Prince Albert. Above these is a print of Prince Albert, in midshipman's uniform, and all around the room are portraits of cele-brated naval officers—Keppel, Brooke of Sara-wak, &c. The sides of the bed room are covered with neat chintz. The rooms of His Grace of Newcastle and Lord St. Germains

No gorgeous scarlet coat, glossy and richly plumed cocked hat, and resplendent "Orders" decked his slight figure now, no nobby civil-ian's costume set off those well shaped but as yet undeveloped limbs-nothing but a vulgar tweed suit, with a common straw hat wore he. All efforts to count the number of strands in the straw and to ascertain the cut of his trowsers failed! It is safe to presume, however, that the latter were peg tops.

The Zouaves of the Revolution. At this time it may be interesting to know that there were Zouaves in the War of Independence. The extract of a letter, written by a young soldier in the Connecticut army to his parents, which follows, states the fact: " Dear Parents :- Our company arrived here last night very late, hungry and tired. Training is a good deal harder than old Squire Fell tells of. If he'd marched fourteen miles a day for three days and carried his prog, besides father's old French war fusee, I calculate he'd not been so encouraging to us boys. I don't find fault, mind; I only wish to let you know that we are not on a May party.

"At Milford tavern we were joined by two companies of soldiers from New Haven, and a company of 'queer fellows,' as Jake calls them. from the southern colonies. They are all rifle-men, and are commanded by Colonel Cresap. They don't use any beds, as we do, but sleep right on the ground, all in a row, like Indians do. But their antics in military exercises are of the curiousest kind. They load and fire their rifles lying flat on their bellies. After that they tangle themselves all up in a knot, and look just like a porcupine, with their guns sticking out all over them. But the wondermost part of their actions is their hitting a mark. Any one of them can hit a small potato at forty rods distance. You never saw anything like it. When we get to camp I will write more about these riflemen, who would amuse the girls if they could see them cut

The company described in this letter is also alluded to in Moore's Diary of the Revolution, as follows:

"August 7, 1775 .- On Friday evening last arrived at Lancaster, Penn., on their way to the American camp, Capt. Cresap's company of riflemen, consisting of 130 active, brave young fellows, many of whom have been in the late expedition under Lord Dunmore against the Indians. They bear in their bodies visible

They appear as if they were entirely unacquainted with, and had never felt the passion of, fear. With their rifles in their hands, they assume a kind of omnipotence over their ene-mies. One cannot much wonder at this when we mention a fact which can be fully attested by several of the reputable persons who were eye-witnesses of it. Two brothers in the company took a piece of board five inches broad and seven inches long, with a bit of white pa-per, about the size of a dollar, nailed in the enter, and while one of them supported this board perpendicularly between his knees, the other, at a distance of upward of 60 yards and without any kind of rest, shot eight bullets through it successively, and spared a brother's Another of the company held a barrel stave perpendicularly in his hands with one edge lose to his side while one of his comrades, at the same distance and in the same manner be-fore mentioned, shot several bullets thought it without any apprehension of danger on either side. The spectators, appearing to be amazed at these feats, were told that there were upat these feats, were told that there were upward of fifty persons in the same company who could do the same thing; that there was not one who could not plug 19 bullets out of 20, as they termed it, within an inch of the head of a tenpenny nail. In short, to evince the confidence they possessed in their dexterity with these kind of arms, some of them proposed to stand with apples on their heads, while others, at the same distance, undertook to shoot them off; but the people who saw the other experiments declined to be witnesses of this.

John up and presented him with a dollar or two, which he thus acknowledged:

"Thank'e, massa; Southern gemmen always so—reprimend us if we don't tend 'em right, but dey always gives us a dollar or two 'fore dey leave. But dese Abolishun gemmen mighty hard to suit, and require so much 'tention, an' when dey leave shake your hand, look up to de sky, an' say: 'God bless you, my unfortunted friend, and elevate you in the scale of humanity,' or something like dat, but never give us a thing to elevate us."

WASHINGTON, D. C., TRURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1860.

Nº. 2,344

"At night a great fire was kindled around a pole planted in the court-house square, where the company, with their captain at their head, all naked to the waist and painted like sav-ages, except the captain, who was in an Indian shirt, indulged a vast concourse of people with a perfect exhibition of a war dance, and all the treme delicacy and regularity of feature, thorough refinement in expression, and a countenance the natural animation of which was probably hightened by the excitement of the countenance in the excitement of the countenance in the countenance resentation could possibly come nearer the original. The captain's expertness and agility. in particular, in these experiments, astonished every beholder. This morning they will set out on their march for Cambridge."

The Bladensburg Dueling Ground. The Philadelphia Ledger gives some remi-niscences of this spot, which are at once interesting and sad:

In 1814, Edward Hopkins was killed here in a duel. This seems to be the first fashionable murder of which this place was the theatre. In 1819, A. T. Mason, a United States Senator from Virginia, fought with his sister's husband, John McCarty, here. McCarty was averse to fighting, and thought there was no necessity for it; but Mason would fight. Mc-Carty Carty named muskets, loaded with grape-shot, and so near together that they would hit heads if they fell on their faces. This was changed by the seconds to loading with bullets, and ta-king twelve feet as the distance. Mason was killed instantly, and McCarty had his collarbone broken.

In 1820, Commodore Decatur was killed in duel here by Commodore Barron. At the first fire both fell forward, with their heads within ten feet of each other; and, as each supposed himself mortally wounded, each fully and freely forgave the other, still lying on the ground.

Decatur expired immediately, but Barron eventually recovered.

In 1821, two strangers named Lega and Sega appeared here, fought, and Sega was instantly killed. The neighbors only learned this much of their names from the marks on their gloves left on the ground. Lega was not hurt.
In 1822, Midshipman Locke was killed here by a clerk of the Treasury Department named

Gibson. The latter was not hurt.

In 1826, Henry Clay fought (his second duel) with John Randolph just across the Potomac, as Randolph preferred to die, if at all, on Virginia soil. He received Clay's shot, and then fired into the air. This was in accordance with een given to Lord Lyons, the British Embas-ador, to receive invitations for His Royal Mrs. Clay, and alluded to the quiet sleep of her child and the repose of the mother. Randolph quickly replied: "I shall do nothing to disturb the sleep of the child or the repose of the mother." General Jessup, whose funeral I attended last week, was Clay's second. When Mr. Randelph fired, he remarked:

"I do not shoot at you, Mr. Clay," and ex-tending his hand, advanced toward Clay, who rushed to meet him. Randolph showed Clay where his ball struck his coat, and said, facetiously: "Mr. Clay, you owe me a coat." Clay replied:

"Thank God the debt is no greater!" They were friends ever after. In 1832, Martin was killed by Carr. Their first names are not remembered. They were from the South. In 1833, Mr. Key, son of Frank Key, and brother of P. Barton Key, met Mr. Sherborn and exchanged a shot, when Sherborn said: " Mr. Key, I have no desire to kill you." "No matter," said Key, "I came to kill

"Very well, then," said Sherborn, "I will kill you." And he did. In 1838, W. J. Graves, of Kentucky, assuming the quarrel of James Watson Webb with Jonathan Cilley, of Maine, selected this place for Cilley's murder; but the parties learning that Webb, with two friends, Jackson and Merrell, were armed and in pursuit, for the purpose of assassinating Cilley, moved toward the river and nearer the city. Their pursuers moved toward the river, but missed the parties, and then returned to the city, to which they were soon followed by Graves and the corpse of Cilley.

In 1845, a lawyer, named Jones, fought with and killed a Dr. Johnson. In 1851, R. A. Hoole and A. J. Dallas had a hostile meeting here. Dallas was shot in the shoulder, but recovered.

In 1852, Daniel and Johnson, two Richmond editors, held a harmless set-to here, which terminated in coffee and not in coffins. In 1853, Davis and Ridgeway fought here, Ridgeway allowed his antagonist to fire without returning the shot.

THE FIRST LOCOMOTIVE TRIP .- Major Horatio Allen, the engineer of the New York and Eric Railroad, in a speech made during the recent festival occasion, gave the following account of the first trip made by a locomotive on this continent:—"When was it? Who was it? And who awakened its energies and directed its movements? It was in the year 1828, on the banks of the Lackawaxen, at the commencement of the railroads connecting the canal of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company with their coal mines—and he who ad dresses you was the only person on that loco-motive. The circumstances which led to my being alone on the engine, were these: The road had been built in the summer; the struc-ture was of hemlock timber, and rails of large dimensions notched on caps, placed far apart.

The timber had cracked and warped, from exposure to the sun. After about 300 feet of straight line, the road crossed the Lackawaxen creek on trestle work about 30 feet high, with a curve of 355 to 400 feet radius. The impression was very general that the iron monster would either break down the road or it would leave the track at the curve and plunge into the creek. My reply to such apprehensions was that it was too late to consider the proba-bility of such occurrence; there was no other course than to have a trial made of the strange animal, which had been brought here at a great expense; but that it was not necessary that more than one should be involved in its marks of their prowess, and show scars and wounds which would do honor to Homer's liked. They show you, to use the poet's words, 'Where the gor'd battle bled at every vein!' One of the warriors in particular shows the cicatrice of four bullet holes through his body. These men have been bred in the woods to hardships and dangers from their infancy.

In that it was not necessary that more than one should be involved in its fate; that I would take the first ride alone, and the time would come when I should look back to the incident with great interest. As I placed my hand on the throttle valve handle, I was undecided as to whether I should move slowly or with a fair degree of speed; but behandle, lieving that the road would prove safe, and ers from their infancy. lieving that the road would prove safe, and preferring, if we did go down, to go hand-somely, and without any evidence of timidity, I started with considerable velocity, passed the curve over the creek safely, and was soon out of hearing of the vast assemblage. At the end of two or three miles I reversed the valve, and returned without an accident, having thus made the first railroad trip, by locomotive, on the Western hemisphere."

THE GREAT ELEVATOR .- A Southern gentleman, at one of the hotels in Pennsylvania last week, perceiving that the dining-room servant, a negro, was bestowing his attentions elsewhere to his neglect, called up John, and accosted him is this wise: "John, I have servants at home, and am waited upon as a gentleman should be. I am neglected here, and am tired of it. I give you fair notice that I shall inform the proprietors The consequence was John became very attentive during the few days the gentleman remained. On going away, the gentleman called John up and presented him with a dollar or two, which he thus acknowledged:
